

THE SITE R PANELS

In the Spring of 1990, Linda Schele distributed a letter describing a number of unprovienced Maya panels that she called the Site R panels. Although the panels are from more than one location, she followed Peter Mathews' "Site Q" with the next letter of the alphabet.

I did not make the original photographs, but copied the images that were lent to me by the then owner. I accepted them with the proviso that the images could be distributed freely.

On the following pages are the Site R Panels.

In a letter dated June 1, 1990, Nikolai Grube writes in part, "...on a new reading for the T516 verb. This verb is clearly associated with the representation of dancing, so I think it reads ak'ot/ak'otah which is the Cholan word for "to dance". (Bird Jaguar of Yaxchilan is in dancing position [left figure]). "he is dancing with the snake" or "he dances the snake"

Nikolai Grube suggested the word k'oh "mask" should appear in

I don't know why Linda included this panel in
the site R group
